PHOENIX, Sept. 27, 2017 /PRNewswire/ -- Troxell, a national leader in education technology and collaboration solutions for more than 60 years, is happy to announce John Burd as the new Account Executive for the Southeast Pennsylvania Territory. He will be assisting schools in his area in achieving their education technology needs and initiatives.

"Troxell has been an industry leader for years," said John Burd. "Now that I am a part of the Troxell team, I can assist those who are looking to make the right technology choices for their school districts. I look forward to helping districts in Southeast Pennsylvania meet their technology goals."

"John brings a great enthusiasm and history with school districts around the region that will help our customers," said Dottie Stewart, Regional Vice President of Troxell's Northeast and Central Territories. "His experience in the education industry is the perfect fit for his new role at Troxell and I am very excited to welcome him to the team."

Before working for Troxell, John Burd was a Technology Director at a school district in New Jersey. He strived to bring great technology to students and staff alike by helping them move into a completely one-to-one world with the added need for interactive technologies in the classroom. In this role, John was able to integrate these needed classroom tools into his entire district. As an Account Executive at Troxell, John will support school districts as they seek to implement new programs through education technology solutions.

You may contact John Burd at his office phone: 610-565-4686, his mobile phone: 215-359-5825, and his email: john.burd@trox.com.
